

- The Student Experience Study examines how different entry pathways to college education (e.g., transfer or traditional routes) influence student mental health. The study also examines how institutional resources can improve mental health in the face of the existing challenges students encounter.
- Ages: Student at UCLA
- What is involved: This is an anonymous online survey that will be taken in one sitting (approximately one hour). The survey is compiled of twenty short questionnaires that ask about demographic information, mental health symptoms, utilization of UCLA resources/communities, student perceptions of UCLA resources/communities, and other experiences you may encounter as a student.

The study can be completed one of two ways 1) Online through the SONA website (for course credit); 2) Send an email to bablab.ucla@gmail.com with the following subject line: "Student Experience Study Request". Please include in the email that you are a student at UCLA would like to participate in the Student Experience Study.

- What do i get out of participating:
  - If you complete the survey through the SONA website you will receive course credit.
